

Orpheum Water Lily

Six water lilies, every one a beautiful girl, will be the extra attraction of the Orpheum show next week. Each of the girls is an expert diver and swimmer and the tank in which they cavort is the largest ever used in vaudeville. The "Water Lilies" are a myriad of beautiful, dazzling mermaids of Venus-like form and they amaze with their daring diving, swimming and aquatic feats.

what of The Hague peace conference? Has that chamber been converted into a morgue and do ghosts laugh in tension in the shadowed corners? What, indeed, of the soul of Europe?—Los Angeles Graphic.

THE FOOD SOT

THE poor gink who tries to pour all the booze down his own throat is not the only drunkard. There are a great many persons who would draw away from a jag in holy horror, but who will sit down at a table and stuff themselves till their fat faces turn purple. They go on a jag every time they eat a meal. They cram away enough to kill a mule and then play golf and take hot baths to reduce the fat. The exercise they need is the exercise of a little will. Even a hog will quit when it has enough, but it remains for man, the supposedly superior beast, to poke food into his gullet long after his hunger has been satisfied.

There are men keen in the business world who would fire the head of a department if they caught him deliberately doing something to impair his efficiency; yet these same men, who should have better sense, will sit down to the table and gormandize in a way to bring shame to a self-respecting hog. They eat themselves into a premature grave, or into a state of obese inefficiency. Obesity is dangerous. Insurance science teaches us the peril of too much fat.

How often have you heard some fat person say, "Oh, if I could only reduce my weight." Then see him sit down and eat enough for ten men. You fat stiff, you don't need medicine, you don't need to spend your money for expensive systems. Quit making a pig out of yourself; cut out the flesh pots. Use a little will power. You can get rid of that fat if you'll quit feeding it. Try it and see.—The Jeffersonian.
